RESOURCES

TIPS FOR SAFE SURFING

A GUIDE FOR PARENTS AND TEENS

FOR PARENTS

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC)
A national clearinghouse of information about missing and exploited children, including children who are sexually exploited through the Internet. Includes a downloadable Internet safety quiz for adults.
http://www.missingkids.com
You can also report to NCMEC by calling 1-800-843-5678

Washington State Attorney General
The attorney general’s SafetyNet program provides information and resources for parents and children about Internet safety.
http://www.atg.wa.gov/safetynet/index.shtml

The Washington State Patrol Missing Children Services
Provides tips and resources for reporting and preventing missing children, including information on creating a personal identification kit for your child:
1-800-KIDLOST (1-800-543-5678)
http://www.wsp.wa.gov/missing/ourkids.htm

Washington State Department of Information Services

FOR TEENS

Don’t Believe the Type!
The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children’s Web site for kids provides guidance for safer online use.
http://tcs.cybertipline.com/

Washington State Attorney General
Includes tips for kids about how to stay safe while using the Internet.
http://www.atg.wa.gov/safetynet/kids1.shtml

Prepared by:
Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction
Washington State School Safety Center
http://www.k12.wa.us/SafetyCenter/
FAMILY SAFETY GUIDELINES FOR THE INTERNET

One out of five teens is sexually solicited online each year. There are specific things you can do to help keep your own teens safe. Start by getting involved! Educate yourself on how the Internet works and keep tabs on your child’s computer use.

TEACH

- Create a written Internet safety plan. Set rules for Internet and e-mail use. Include specific strategies for what your teen will do if they are sexually solicited online, or if they are frightened by an online encounter. Sign the plan and post it near the computer.
- Remind your teen not to disclose personal information online.
- Draft a list together of what not to share, including name, age, school, phone number, home address, and photos.
- Talk frequently to your teen. Discuss their online friends just as you talk about their other friends.

MONITOR

- Keep the computer in a common area of the house. This makes it easier to monitor computer use.
- Ask your teen to tell you right away about any uncomfortable online experience, with assurances that you will not be angry if he or she confides in you.
- Consider filtering or monitoring software. While they can help you control your teen’s online use, these devices are no substitute for parental involvement and supervision.
- Be aware. Your teen might be using computers at school, public libraries, and friends’ homes.

REPORT

- Know the signs of “grooming.” When someone initiates online contact with a young person with the intention of establishing a sexual relationship, it is called “grooming.”
- If you suspect online “grooming” of your teen or of any other child, report it to your local law enforcement agency.

KEEPING SAFE ONLINE

The Internet can be a great research tool and a fun way to keep in touch with friends and family. But going online also presents some possible dangers that you need to know about. Here are some ways you can steer clear of trouble while using the Web.

TELL

- If you encounter someone or something online that makes you uncomfortable, tell a trusted adult right away! The adult can view the information on the monitor and decide whether to report to law enforcement.
- “Grooming” is when an adult goes online to meet young people with the intention of establishing an inappropriate relationship.
- If you suspect that you or someone you know is the target of grooming, tell a trusted adult immediately.
- If something you see online seems “too good to be true,” it probably is. If you receive any offers that involve going to a meeting, having someone visit your house, or sending money or credit card information, tell your parent or guardian.

NOTHING IS PRIVATE

- Think about what you type. Never send your personal information, such as name, address, phone number, pictures, or the name of your school out into cyberspace.
- E-mails can be forwarded with the click of a mouse. Remember that any personal information you send to someone could be sent to other people very quickly.

BE SMART

- Never make plans to meet an online “friend” in person without first checking with your parent/guardian. If your parent/guardian is OK with the idea, bring him or her along and make the meeting in a public place.
- Remember, no matter how friendly and fun someone seems online, they may be completely different in real life.
- Your online behavior is your responsibility. Don’t harass or bully, and don’t respond when someone else tries to pick an online fight.